Tufto Muddy Buddy Rain Suit for Muddy and Wet Days It rained all day, your kids ran around the house like cavemen, there were constant falls, and there's no shortage of tears. You look out and you see gray skies and a load of wet soil. Hoping for a few minutes of silence, you send the kids out. It's actually pretty amazing, as soon as we send our kids outside after (or during) a rainy day, the first thing we do is run towards the puddles. And to be honest, I can't blame them! Tufto Muddy Buddy Rain Suits are for parents as a parent of two children who love to play hard, there is a part of my brain that always wants to keep them as far away from anything wet, and for one reason, I'm straight up selfish. Do Less Laundry with Tufto Muddy Buddy Rain Suits As a working mom, I beg a few hours home with my kids. However, instead of snuggling with them before bed, I'm hunched over the sink washing mud and dirt from the tools only for the same thing to happen the next day. One of these nights, washing my second pair of boots, I decided to take my time back. After hours of reading reviews online (and searching the Tales of a Mountain Mama Facebook page), I decided to listen to the advice there's no such thing as bad weather, just bad clothes and I bought the Tufto rain suit. Strengthened knees are a big bonus! What a Tufto Muddy Buddy rain suit is the Tufto rain suit is simple: it's a thin, waterproof suit that can be worn alone or over a coat and snow pants. It comes with a hood and two front zippers for kids to choose from to help them with equipment. The suit has elastic openings for the wrist and legs. What we love I put this suit to the test with my 4-year-old son, and here's what I loved. First, it fits over snow gear for cold months, washes easily, and dual zipper means it's easy to slide on and out. Secondly, the suit itself is cheap, durable, and because it is easy, I can easily throw in my backpack for hiking rainy days. One of the best parts of this suit, is that it is fast drying. I don't have to throw snow pants in the dryer, just squeeze the suit and hang it to dry. Tufto packs down to a small size and easily matches my other hiking gear (don't forget bear spray!) What we think could be improved zero insulation: Living in the mountains, if it is cold 8 months of the year (or so it seems) we live in layers. Sometimes Sometimes Snow pants under the suit feels a little funny for the kids at first, but once they hit their first puddle- all the concerns seem to disappear. A little stupid: The costume is a little oversized in arms, waist, and legs, which is great for flexible sizing, but of course it looks a little stupid. My son decided to grow up instead of the outside, which means that his lanky limbs seem a little lost in the suit. Why would I buy this again At the end of the day, I want to make life simpler. Tufto Muddy Buddy Rain Suit allowed me to be the fun mom, allowing her kids jump into puddles while also saving my common sense and time at the end of the day. If you have more than one puddle jumper, buy this suit a larger size, get a few more years of use and then move it on! © 2019, Tales of a Mountain Mama. All rights reserved. The bigger they are, the deeper and the dirtiest they were, the better. It seems to be an almost universal experience, with some kids actively looking forward to the rain in order to go splash around outside-though oddly enough, some of these kids horror bath time... I somehow thought that rain boots and a raincoat or umbrella were in some way enough to keep us dry, even as splashwater soaked our pants and ran into our boots. Now, as parents, we no longer seek to jump into puddles. In fact, most of us cringe when we see our kids doing this, knowing that wet, muddy laundry is now in our future. Wouldn't it be great if there was a full-body rain suit that could keep kids clean and dry? Oh, wait... There it is! If you've never heard of a Muddy Buddy, or Calikids Waterproof Suit keep reading. Alice, motivated by the countryside, had just finished a collection of paintings depicting the animals in the farmyard. John found the paintings sold and decided to create a line of aprons based on Alice's work. The aprons marketed and maintained on sale, turning this cottage business into the Hatley firm. The aprons turned into clothes and Hatley prospered. Alice and John gladly handed over the reins to their three sons, Chris, Nick and Jeremy.
